Less than seven hours' sleep raises heart risk - The Daily Telegraph, Wed Dec 24, 2008

Getting __61__ than seven hours sleep a night may significantly __62__ the risk of suffering heart disease, a __63__ indicates.

__64__ found that people who get more rest are less likely to have calcium clogging their arteries, which can lead to heart __65__ and heart failure.

Scientists believe that the body is better able to clear the build-up from the crucial blood vessels if it gets more __66__.

__67__ levels of cholesterol, high blood pressure and smoking are known to __68__ the risk of suffering hardened arteries.

Scientists have proven that the __69__ of regular sleep a person gets can also affect their chances of developing the condition. They tested 495 people, __70__ from 35 to 47, over five years, none of whom had evidence of hardened arteries at the start of the study. By the end, __71__, 12 per cent of volunteers were sufferers.

__72__ people in the study got between six and seven hours sleep a night.

After adjusting for factors, __73__ age and sex, researchers found that one extra hour of sleep a night could cut the chance of developing hardening of the __74__ by 33 per cent, according to the results published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Christopher Ryan King, from the University of Chicago, who led the study, said that the findings showed a "robust and novel" __75__ between the number of hours slept a night and the risk of heart disease. But he said that his team was still __76__ what caused the association.

"Future studies will be needed for crucial extensions to these results", he said, "for example, does sleep moderate the rate at which calcification accumulates?"

Ellen Mason, senior cardiac nurse at the British Heart Foundation, said: "It is not yet quite clear how sleep affects our heart disease risk___77___ this study adds to___78___ research suggesting that getting enough sleep may ___79___ to keep our heart and circulation ___80___.

Heart disease kills about 105,000 people in Britain every year and another 2.6 million people are known to be living with the condition.

Experts recommend that adults get between seven and eight hours of sleep a night, teenagers nine hours, and children between 10 and 11 hours.
